

TODD CORCORAN ONE GUY.
ONE GUITAR.
ALL KINDS OF MUSIC.
 THE ECLECTIC GUITARIST

What is an “eclectic” guitarist?
An eclectic guitarist is a guitarist that is interested in and performs many different styles of music.

Who is Todd Corcoran?

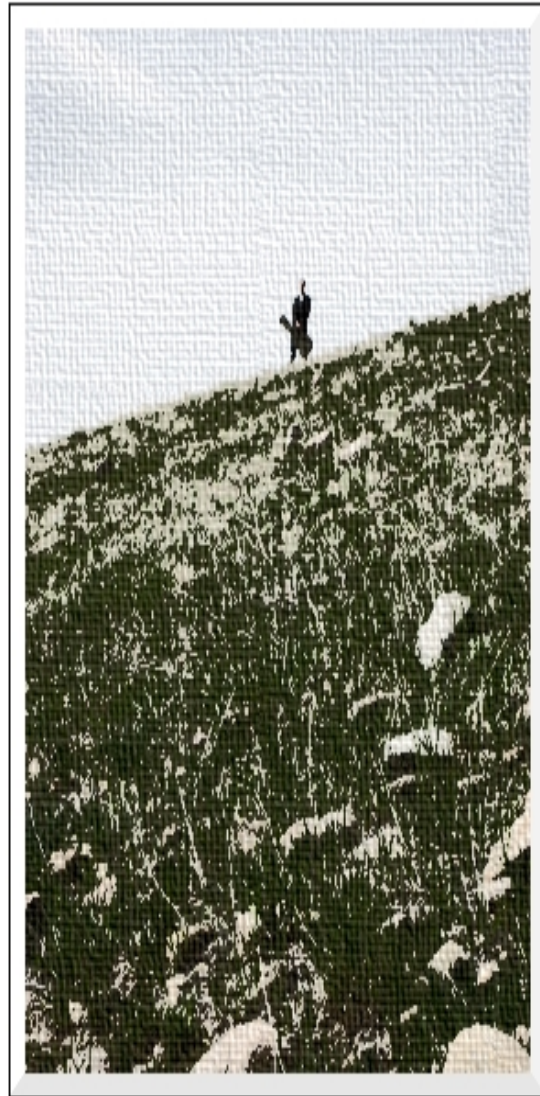

Todd Corcoran is a good-natured finger-picking guitarist with an uncontrollable, unending curiosity for music, musicians and playing a guitar. Originally from Indiana, now living in Colorado, Todd taught himself how to write songs at an early age. He was eventually trained as a classical guitarist, earning bachelor's and master's degrees in music. Today, his interest and curiosity in all forms of music is represented in a style that is accessible and wide-ranging and can best be described as “eclectic.”

What does Todd Corcoran do?

Todd is a solo artist — a singer/songwriter and solo guitarist. His repertoire spans a wide range of influences: rock, folk, country, pop, classical, jazz, blues, flamenco, etc... His performances are based around his continuously growing catalog of originals, with an ample amount of diverse covers and “eclectic” instrumentals mixed in. It wouldn't be uncommon to hear Todd perform a tune from Jimi Hendrix, AC/DC, Hank Williams, Johnny Cash, Wes Montgomery, Django Reinhardt, Joaquin Rodrigo, and J.S. Bach all in the same night.

What does he hope to achieve?

As an artist, the best that anyone can hope to achieve is to be able to express who they are at any given moment, honestly and completely, without any apologies or regrets. Playing, writing, performing, and enjoying all styles of music is who Todd Corcoran is and will continue to be.
